CV in Brief

Let me explain my perspective first. What I am going to elaborate on is that during my working years as a professor (about 5 years), I have been trying to encourage students to believe in their internal powers as I know that almost all of them are living in poverty, and wittingly or unwittingly, the poor condition has been covered not only the economic but also their social, cultural and political aspects. For me, despite all inequality and severe pressures on them, mainly because most of them are among the Shia minority in their regions, the only thing that can give them a hand to get rid of such an irritating situation is science and its relevant skills. Regardless of the political and religious attitudes, I opine that science and skills associated with jobs are the only ways to compete. Otherwise, they will keep running into a vicious circle of quarrels or disappointment. In addition, I have been putting emphasis on two neglected issues in their countries: women's rights, and the environment. Thus, not to mention that I have conducted my students to select the theses' titles in these areas.
